Investigation Closed for Officer- Involved Shooting

The Macomb County Sheriff's Office has completed its investigation into an officer-involved shooting in Shelby Township that resulted in the death of 25-year-old Kanwarbir Malhi. According to an MCSO press release, the investigation is closed and no charges were authorized.

On November 2, 2018, Shelby Police responded to Spring Hill Apartments on the report of a stolen vehicle. The complainant suspected her son – who she said was using drugs – stole the car. The investigation revealed that Malhi had told a family member that if police were called, he would not be taken alive and mentioned suicide by cop.

On patrol just after midnight, police spotted the stolen car in the Spring Hill Apartment complex. Seven Shelby Township officers responded to the scene and gave verbal commands to Malhi, who they said was non-compliant and he indicated he had a gun. According to the report, Malhi then "abruptly exited the vehicle making movements towards his jacket pocket."

An officer discharged one round from his shotgun which struck Malhi, who was transported to Troy Beaumont Hospital and pronounced deceased at 1:45 a.m.

On Thursday, March 7, USPBL is hosting an open house inside the AAA Clubhouse at Jimmy John's Field for families interested in learning more about the league's Host Family Program.

Host Families invite a USPBL player into their home for the duration of the season, which runs May through September. To ensure that both families and players have a good experience, the USPBL takes care in matching players and families.

The USPBL, which has produced 26 Major League Baseball players during its three seasons, said that host families are an important part of its players reaching their goal to play major league baseball.

Those interested in being a host family are invited to the open house to learn more about the program. Food and beverages will be provided, and host families from the 2018 season and USPBL staff will be available to share information and answer questions.

No Charges in Officer-Involved Shooting Case

No gun was found on Malhi or in his vehicle. Officer dash camera footage and audio was reviewed and multiple witnesses were interviewed. A toxicology report confirmed drugs were in Malhi's system at the time of his death. The investigation noted Malhi's non-compliance, failure to show officers his hands, and movements consistent with reaching for a weapon.

In a press conference after the incident, Township Police Chief Robert Shelide said, "There were furtive hand gestures made along with verbal statements, and that's what led our officer into firing his weapon."

The officer who fired the shot was placed on administrative leave after the incident. Chief Shelide said the officer has been on the force for 17 years with an exemplary record.

Rep. Wozniak Calls for Juvenile Justice Reforms

State Rep. Doug Wozniak introduced legislation this week as part of a bipartisan plan to transform the way 17-year-olds are treated in Michigan's criminal justice system.

House Bills 4133-4136 would raise the age at which individuals are considered adults for the purpose of prosecuting and adjudicating criminal offenses. This means that 17-year-olds would be treated as minors within the juvenile system in most circumstances, though prosecutors would continue to have some discretion to prosecute minors who commit violent crimes in the adult system.

Michigan is one of just four states in the country that automatically prosecute 17-year-olds as adults when they're accused of breaking the law.

"This is an outdated practice that must be eliminated if we're going to get serious about criminal justice reform," Wozniak said in press release. "The juvenile court system has age-appropriate resources that will help rehabilitate 17-year-old offenders and set them up to become productive members of society."

The plan also sets up a funding mechanism to help counties deal with the increased costs from the uptick of juvenile offenders in the system.

"In the long run, the benefits are going to outweigh the costs," Wozniak said in a statement. "Investing in rehabilitation rather than incarceration reduces the number of repeat offenders, improves public safety, and ultimately frees up more public tax dollars to be invested in schools, roads, and other critical services."

According to Wozniak, it costs about $35,000 a year to house each of Michigan's prisoners, and no other state invests a larger share of its budget to prisons. Michigan's current prison population is about 39,000, and 20 percent of the general fund budget is dedicated to corrections.

The plan has been referred to the House Judiciary Committee for consideration.

STEVENSON JUNIOR Matthew Kinnaird bowled a perfect game at Stevenson's meet against Utica on January 27. The two-handed bowler used a Storm IQ ball during his second meet of the day. Congratulations to Matthew for bowling a 300!

This is the highest level of competition for a Preliminary division team. This year, the division included 10 teams from across the Midwest.

The ONYX Preliminary team is made up of 12 skaters, ages 8 through 10, from the Rochester and Macomb areas. They practice together at the ONYX Suburban Ice Arena under head coach Helene Wolf of Oakland Township and coach Erin Bridge of Troy.

Cranbrook Exhibition on Extinction Asks the Big Questions

by ELENA DURNBAUGH

Despite the recent cold weather, the average temperature of the continental U.S. is nearly 2 degrees Fahrenheit warmer than it was a century ago. Record breaking temperatures, massive storms, and sweeping fires are happening regularly throughout the country.

Many scientists think that climate change could have catastrophic results, and some have even suggested the current changes will cause the planet's next large-scale extinction. The Cranbrook Institute of Science newest exhibit, "Doom of the Dinosaurs: Are We Next?," which opens February 8, looks at the past to ask questions about the future.

The exhibit challenges visitors to ask big questions. Could humans, through global warming, ecosystem destruction, and pollution, cause the collapse of life on earth as we know it?

"It sounds rather bleak, I realize," said Karl Mayry, who designed and built the exhibit Cranbrook, "but it's kind of fun."

The earth has experienced five large-scale extinctions in its history. Museum visitors will be able to explore previous eras through interactive digital displays, fossils, casts, and models of dinosaurs and other animals. They'll learn about what may have caused previous extinctions, and examine the evidence to determine if a similar event could happen in the future.

"We're trying to put it all in perspective," said Mike Narlock, the Head of Exhibits at Cranbrook Institute of Science.

The Adams Road Mastodon, found in Rochester Hills along the Clinton-River trail, will also be a part of the new exhibit. Pieces of the fossil will be on display as an example of megafauna that used to be on earth but climate change made extinct.

"You can tie it back to your own backyard," Novack said. "It's always good when you can make something relevant."

In addition to prehistoric species, visitors will learn about more recent extinctions, like the passenger pigeon and Carolina parakeet, which both died out at the turn of the 20th century. They'll also learn about how scientist gather data about climate change using ice core samples from Antarctica.

People are invited to draw their own conclusions, but Mayry and Narlock said that the evidence is too important to ignore.

"Data doesn't lie," Mayry said. "We're not taking sides here" Mayry said.

Narlock agreed that the goal of the exhibit was to present people with evidence.

"When a canary dies in a mine shaft because of lack of oxygen, is it alarmist?" he said. "Slow change is hard to get worked up about... but by the time that it happens, it's usually too late to do something about it."

Narlock acknowledged that the situation is complicated. Many of the non-renewable resources that contribute to climate change, like fossil fuels, are inexpensive and easy to use. New forms of technology can be costly.

AT THE EXHIBIT, visitors will explore past epochs through fossils, casts, and molds of extinct creatures.

"There are other pressures," he said. "There are no easy answers, but the first step in the process is admitting there's an issue."

The display doesn't leave visitors without hope, though. One panel in the exhibit reads "all is not lost," and provides people with different scientific organizations researching climate change like the World Wildlife Fund and NASA.

"Maybe it's a bit of a wakeup call," Mayry said of the exhibit. "The earth is not static. It's changing all the time... Much of history, even 400 million years ago, is relevant to our future."

The dinosaur exhibit isn't the only piece of history on display at Cranbrook. The museum has several permanent exhibits focusing on both natural history and anthropology.

In addition to the exhibits, Cranbrook has one of the only publicly available observatories in the state. It also runs a fossil lab, which gives visitors the chance to get hands-on with real fossils. During the lab, people can clean their own fossils and learn what it's like to be a paleontologist.

"It's part of the overall experience of being a scientist," Novack said. "Whether you're a little kid or a grandparent, there's something to do."

"Doom of the Dinosaurs" will be at Cranbrook through September. The Cranbrook Institute of Science is at 39221 Woodward Avenue in Bloomfield Hills. To learn more, visit science.cranbrook.edu/.

Bite Guards: Yes, They Are for Everyone

by SHAWN VAN DE VYVER, DDS
Great Lakes Dentistry

Do you ever get headaches in the front of your head or around your temples? Have you ever needed to get a crown because your back teeth started breaking? (I get that a lot at my office, patients breaking teeth) Don't worry! If you have, that means one thing... you're normal!

night when they're asleep, and they don't even know it.

When you wake up in the morning with a headache in your forehead or temples, or your cheek muscles are sore to chew anything in the morning, that could be a sign that your clenching muscles are overly active when you're asleep.

Even though most people actively grind their teeth during sleep, a majority aren't aware of it. It takes a little elbowing from your partner to get the signal across.

Not surprisingly, most of my patients have reported a better Teeth, believe it or not, weren't meant to last a lifetime. Shocking, I know. A dentist telling you your teeth are supposed to break isn't what you wanted to hear.

There's very little organic material in the outer layer of a tooth (the enamel layer, what you see when you smile big). In fact, 98% of the enamel is mineral, like rock. Over time, after thousands of meals and snacks, and biting millions of times, your tooth begins to develop cracks and hairline fractures.

Most of the time, those small cracks don't develop into anything significant, but the more you chew, the deeper the cracks become and more of the tooth begins to break apart.

The best way to slow this process down, preserve your teeth, and prevent your teeth from cracking, is to wear an acrylic appliance that can take the biting pressure away from the individual teeth. That appliance is called a bite guard, night guard, or bite splint.

The reason this is called a night guard is because many people (over half of the adult population according to some studies) clench or grind their teeth at night's sleep and a more energized feeling during the day after just a few nights of wearing their bite splint. And now, after feeling the results of nightly treatment to address their clenching habit, those patients won't go to sleep without it!

The great thing about the new 3D printing technology at Great Lakes Dentistry is that we can print a bite guard for you right in the office. So if your dog gets a hold of yours, we simply need to open the file from our computer and print a replacement.

Wearing a night guard to help you sleep and prevent your teeth from breaking is just one of the preventive treatments your dentist can help you with, so make sure you ask your dentist if you could benefit from one. Odds are, it can make a world of difference for you.
